CHESTNUT BLIGHT IS FUNGUS GROWTH

Dr. Mickleborough, Forestry Expert, Says Mr. Candy, of Langhorne, is Mistaken—No Known Remedy for Disease That is Killing Thousands of Chestnut Trees.

Dr. John Mickleborough, of Brooklyn, N. Y., says that L. D. Candy, of Langhorne, is in error in ascribing the cause of the Chestnut tree blight to a small black beetle.

He says the blight is a fungus and belongs to the plant kingdom, as does any common mushroom.

There are beetles and other insects that injure the chestnut and other trees. It is quite possible Mr. Candy has seen some damage to chestnut trees by a species of beetle. Dr. Mickleborough says he has seen the same thing on more than one occasion, when examining forests in Pennsylvania, New Jersey and New York State. The work of the larvae of insects burrowing beneath the bark of chestnut trees is of slight consequence compared with the deadly, all-devastating depredations of the fungus which is the real cause of the blight. Insects can be dealt with by sprays and poisons, whereas the blight cannot be controlled in that way.

Dr. Mickleborough has traced the blight across southeastern Pennsylvania and found it more or less prevalent all along the Delaware Valley as far as Port Jervis, New Jersey is the first State to give it practically all its chestnut growth to this fungus. Seven counties in New York are devastated. The disease has made its appearance in Connecticut and other States along the coast. The spores of the fungus are carried by wind and railroads and are among the chief distributors, not only by creating violent currents of air, but also in carrying chestnut timber from one locality to another. All the bark should be removed from chestnut posts, rails and other things by destroying diseased trees. The development and distribution of spores may be prevented. The blight has been investigated by scientists, and there is not the least doubt about its character, and it is not the work of a beetle nor any other form of insect life.

TO PAVE LOWER YORK ROAD

Section Between Butler Street and Northeast Boulevard Will be Improved at Last.

A long-looked-for improvement is about to be started by the Bureau of Highways, of Philadelphia, which has prepared plans and specifications for the grading and paving of York road, between Butler street and the Northeast Boulevard. Property owners of that section have sought this improvement for years. It will cost about $100,000, and while the city will pay the cost of grading, the owners of abutting property will pay for the paving. The individual shares of the cost are collected through the Law Department.

A question of law is involved in the paving of York road. One time this was a toll road and it was paved with macadam. If this is regarded as "official" paving it is thought that property owners can resist the attempt upon the part of the city to make them pay for the new paving which is characterized as "official" by the Department of Public Works.

The law requires owners of abutting property to pay for the first laid paving, but it is believed that some owner will raise the point whether this is original paving. The courts, both high and low, have found in favor of the latter cases, both for and against property owners. The decisions have been largely guided by the facts and circumstances of the case.

The present operation contemplates the reconstruction of the bridge crossing the track of the Richmond branch of the Reading Railroad at York road and Pike street. The railroad company will bear the expense of building the bridge, plans for which have already been prepared and are awaiting approval by the Board of Supervisors.

Horseshoe Farmers' Club Will hold the annual meeting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Davis W. Hill, this Saturday evening, August 12th, at 7:30 o'clock.

A Souvenir From the Dead

By EDWARD BOCKMAN

Copyright by American Press Association, Inc. 1911

I am one of the old souls who became such by the civil war. An old woman with no hair on my head save what is white as snow, I have passed half a century alone, yet not alone, for I have seen him.

He was killed in one of the battles around Richmond during McClellan's advance upon that city. A year before he had marched away with the soldier boys of '61—how young they seem to have been now and how strange that those who live are included in the men that the boys' mothers and the girls who loved them could send them out to die—he had gone down into Virginia, carrying my heart with him. He had fallen and been thrown into a trench, and then for the first time I wondered that I could have consented to his going.

No one has ever taken his place. I have lived as I live, and yet I dream of him. He is the earthly sphere. For many years I wished to go down to Virginia and visit the spot where he died, and yet I dreamed of him. It was not till the beginning of this century that I could make up my mind to do so.

I went to Richmond and visited the residence of the president of the Confederacy, which is now a museum. There I saw the arms and uniforms of General Robert Lee. I saw what took me nearer to the conflict of years before was a southern lady who told me how when a girl she had listened to the distant booming of guns and how when it reached and losing courage when it drew nearer. From there I went to the battlefield.

I went alone. The battle in which he was taken from me is called Seven Pines. Why it is called Seven Pines I know not. There are thousands of pines there, and I believe they have all grown up since the battle. It was fought in a cornfield. But it has not been filled since that day in 1862, and the trees have had ample time to grow.

I found a long line of low earthworks that was thrown up by McClellan's army, behind which to resist the Confederates hurled against it by General Lee. Forty years had passed over these works, during which the pines had grown up as if to shield the dead and the trenches beneath them, in which so many soldiers' bodies were thrown. Walking on the line of earthworks, every now and again I came to a redoubt, where stood cannon, and there beneath were the ruins made by the gun carriages.

Before going to the field I had been told that I would have a guide. I declined to take one or to go with a party who were conducted by one. I went alone. It was late in the afternoon, and moonlight shone down, coming away. It seemed to me a sacrifice to listen to the story from a human voice told so eloquently by these iron sentinels that stood here and there in the ground over the dead, the warring pines, which with every breeze sighed a requiem. And I wished that I could have a change that came over me was in the day or in the night, whether it was in me or in my surroundings, whether I saw what I seemed to see or it was a half-conscious dream. I know not. But I was back in '62, and it seemed as if the earth of heaven had come upon the earth.

The thunder ceased. The light was from scattered campfires. The sounds were the chatting of burial parties and the falling clods, with occasional volleys fired over the dead.

Suddenly I felt a touch on my shoulder. I looked up, and there was my soldier lover. Could this be he whom I had looked upon as a man? Why, he was but a boy—not a sign of a beard on his face. It was round and full, while in my head were many gray hairs and my face was wrinkled. One moment he stood looking down at me. I reached out for his hand, but before I could clasp it he had faded away.

When I came to myself the morning sun was shining down through the pines. I was lying on my back on the rampart, looking up at a patch of sky between the branches. It was blue and beautiful, with scattered white clouds sailing peacefully over it.

I was filled with consternation at having passed a night out on that battlefield of forty years ago. I raised myself with difficulty. My eyes caught something glimmering with the earth. It was a worn silver ten cent piece. I took it up, rubbed the dirt from it and on it traced with difficulty three letters—M. E. L.

I had forgotten that the night before he had given him a new ten cent piece on which he had scratched my initials.

Is it anything to me whether or no my story is believed, whether I dream, whether where so many soldiers have found one with my initials on it? In my own mind there is no doubt.

DOYLETOWN MAN WAS

VERY POPULAR WITH WOMEN

Now Under Arrest in West on Serious Charge.

A gay Lathario is being brought to justice. Russell I. Wipred, who for the last several months has been getting into the good graces of some of the young women of Doylestown and vicinity, has been arrested by the police of Chicago and held to await the necessary requisition papers from Governor Turner to the Governor of Illinois for his extradition to Bucks county to answer the charge of adultery on complaint made before Justice of the Peace Willis Wall by Mrs. Sarah Ritchie, of Doylestown, mother of Elizabeth Ritchie.

Miss Ritchie, it is said, went to Chicago, deserting her few weeks old child, and coming with the police officer. She Ritchie has since returned home and it was after that the officers located Wipred.

The case was worked up by Constable Atkinson and the papers have been taken up by the Sheriff of Illinois. H. S. Belder by District Attorney William C. Ryan. The Sheriff went to Governor Turner to the Governor of Illinois papers signed by the Governor, and he will at once proceed to Chicago to bring the defendant here for trial.

The defendant's wife who some time ago brought suit against him for non-support. He put up $50 in cash to satisfy the order of the court to pay to his wife a certain amount per week, and before the $50 was eaten up he was declared bankrupt. On the complaint made by Mrs. Ritchie a writ was issued.

The defendant was located in Chicago and gave the proper information to the police of that city, who then the man and placed him under arrest.

While in Doylestown the prisoner worked at the Wipred, trade and his claims that he was a trapper. His manners are pleasing and he seems to have had no serious drinking habits. The good graces of young women. It is claimed by those who have been acquainted on the case that he has not ten other young women of this vicinity into trouble. The young woman whom he fooled under promise of marriage was well known in Doylestown.

BOY DROWNS IN NESHAMINY

Seven Have Lost Their Lives so far This Summer at this Creek.

Neshaminy creek took its seventh victim last Sunday, when Louis Silverman, who lived at Sixth and Race streets, Philadelphia, was drowned. He was the fifth Philadelphia boy who has lost his life in the stream this season.

Silverman and two companions rode up to Oakford, on bicycles to spend the day. The three went in swimming, and Silverman, a poor swimmer, attempted to go across the creek to join his companions, who had swum over.

He sank before he reached the middle, and although his companions made frantic efforts to reach him, was drowned.

The body was recovered an hour later by John C. Cornell, a storekeeper, who grappled for it.

Fares on the Newtown railroad are not affected above Huntington Valley by the new Reading fare schedule that went into effect on August 1st.

"Wilkeshire," the new summer colony being Doylestown near the Willow Grove trolley line, is booming. The hotel has been completed, another is under way, many more lots have been sold and several cottages are being built this summer.

ELECTRIC COMPANY SUE

Defense Affidavit Filed by Jenkinson Plant.

Through their attorneys, Evans & Deitra, the Jenkinson Light Company has filed an affidavit of defense in the Prothonotary's office at Norris-town, owing to the suit brought against them by James E. Rouse on March 3, 1909, in Philadelphia county. The plaintiff obtained a verdict for $217 for damages alleged to have been suffered by him by a non-fulfillment of condition of a contract issued by the defendant for the installation of a power single phase Wagner motor on the premises of the defendant and the latter was supplied with sufficient electric current for the operation of the motor. Monthly bills were received and were paid.

The defendant alleges that the power required to operate the machinery, which plaintiff undertook to operate by means of the motor installed by him, was largely in excess of five-horse power. The defendant denies that it refused to furnish sufficient electric current and that the plaintiff will be required to expend large sums of money in removing the motor and installing other motive power.

THIEVES IN SOUTHAMPTON.

Thieves visited Southampton last week. The house of Edward H. Stradlin was entered by a window and a coat, brass clock, etc., taken; at John Finney's two hats, a pair of shoes, a coat, etc., were taken. At Stephen Mortensen's, where they arrived about 2:30 a. m., a good watch dog scared them away before an entrance to the house was gained. The pump-house at Isaac Bennett's, in Johnsville, was entered the same night, but nothing of any great value was taken.

CHEL TENHAM TOWNSHIP BOASTS 1188 DOGS.

Residents of Cheltenham township cannot by any stretch of imagination be termed doggers of dog tax, however difficult the placing and collection of such a tax may be in other communities and boroughs. And the returns of the tax show that the township is not an unusual degree.

According to the annual statement of income and expenditures of the Cheltenham School District just issued by Harry L. Murphy, of Ogontz the total of income and expenditures collected in the last year totaled $1188—this means that there are just 1188 taxed dogs in the township.

Hattboro Home Happenings

BUSINESS MEN'S MEETING.
The Hattboro Business Men's Association met Thursday evening in the Town Hall. A telegram from the Hattboro Association was presented, directing united action looking to the extension of the trolley line from Hattboro to Hartsville.

The association has compiled figures that show the need for a revenue of about $5000 a year could be expected from the business to be developed along the extension. The report will be presented to President Kruger.

An effort will be made to have the Reading Railroad continue the branch, which was temporarily discontinued after having been discontinued earlier in the summer. The railroad officials have set a date in September when the train is to be discontinued.

If the train is taken off, it is said that the trolley will lose five families and heads of these families use this train to reach their work in Philadelphia.

The association will try to have the railroad keep this train on the schedule. It is said that they will make an effort to have the Reading Railroad Company put on an earlier trolley car from here to Willow Grove. The first car now leaves here at 6:00 a. m., and car leaving at 5:30 would be early.

The effort made to induce the County Commissioners to widen the Penny Bridge on York road, this borough, did not succeed, as the commission on the old date stone it was originally built 1789, but by whom is not known at this time. A committee of Business Men's Association will make an investigation and try to learn who the builders were.

The date of the building was long before the change of the township county, which now cares for the structure and is its reputed owner.

There were many minor matters considered and the meeting was a satisfactory one.

EVENTS

SPORTING EVENT

Foot Race Between Andy, the Foot Race Between Andy, the
and Brown the Booty

Went?
A sporting event, which is the stakeholder in peculiar predicament occurred one evening this week between the barber, Brown, and black, of Moreland avenue, York street, were boasting as to sties as runners. To settle the question which was the best, a race to Willow Grove was proposed.

The purse was to be $4, each place $2 in the hands of the stakeholder, the bartender. When the race was short, so O'Regan had 50 cents to Brown and $1 to Andy.

The winner of the race was Andy, his arrival at the hotel. Brown claims he distanced Andy and reached the hotel first, went stairs to telephone. When he came down there was Andy quietly drinking beer, waiting, as he claims, for Andy to arrive. Both men came into the bar claiming the stake, and in a quandary. If he pays money to Brown, Andy declares will not pay back the $1 loan. One other hand if he pays Andy, then Andy will not return the 50 cents borrowed.

How to decide the question such a momentous one that it hazarded the barber shop assembly after week, and they have referred it to the sporting editor.

Unfortunately the sporting editor is away on vacation and one of the force decline to tackle the job. The printing office devil agents that O'Regan imposed the fun and treat the crowd.

keting large quantities of sugar corn load the loads.

an automobile to expedite its work, the time of carrying the mail from the station to the postoffice has been considerably lessened. There is nothing slow about mail carrying.

CHARLES WYNKOOP HURT

Victim of Peculiar Accident Near Abington.

Charles Wynkoop, the veteran horseman of Abington, was badly hurt last Saturday afternoon, by being struck by an automobile.

Employees of the Mitchell Motor Car Company, of Philadelphia, were going down York road towing a disabled car belonging to Dr. Franklin Watson, of Willow Grove. One of the men was steering the Watson car.

While going down hill below Abington, as Mr. Wynkoop was driving up and over the car, the tow-bar swung too far to one side and struck the road cart, upsetting it and throwing out the driver.

Mr. Wynkoop was picked up with a broken collar bone. His injuries were attended by Dr. A. N. Bagnall.

The Abington police arrested Raymond Beck and George Roach, of Philadelphia, the drivers of the automobile, and they were held for a further hearing, although the affair was an accident.

GOOD RACING AT WARMINSTER.

Dead Heat in Free for all and Other Close Finishes.

There was a large attendance at the Warminster track races last Saturday, and there was lively sport. The contest for the cup donated by Mr. Eldins of Polly Farm, was exciting. In the first heat of this race Easter Boy, driving by Leedom, and Elmhurst, by Entwistle, finished so close together that the judges declared it a dead heat.

Easter Boy won the next two heats.

ORCHARD INSPECTION.

Joseph S. Briggs, state orchardist of this county, is taking up his work in this section after a six months' visit to the western part of the state during which he visited 30 counties. He will probably spend some time hereabouts with instruction to visit the united spect orchards in Horsham, Upper Dublin, Lower Gwynedd, Abington, Cheltenham and parts of Moreland and Springfield. This will require a house-to-house canvas and our readers will therefore be on the lookout for him.

OF INTEREST TO FARMERS.

TIMELY TOPICS OF PLANTS AND PESTS DISCUSSED WEEKLY
By H. A. Surface, State Zoologist of Pa.
FOR GRUBS BORING IN SHADE TREES.

A banker in Clearfield, Pa., finds that some pest is boring into his sugar maple trees, and writes to State Zoologist Surface, at Harrisburg, for information as to the proper treatment.

The reply of Professor Surface was as follows:
"The best thing to do for sugar maple trees that have been attacked by grubs boring into them, is to find the holes, if possible, and with a spring bottom oil can, inject into each the liquid known as carbon bisulfide. Then close the hole with clay or mud. Also, cut off and burn the dying branches, and invigorate the trees by scattering around them nitrate of soda varying the amount from one ounce to one and one-half pounds for each tree, depending upon the size of the tree. Scatter this broadcast from the trunk to a distance farther than the branches extend. Then water the ground well, seeing to it that enough water is used to soak well into the soil. Then spread a mulch of leaves, straw, manure, or straw over the ground, or keep it well and thoroughly cultivated, so that there will be a loose soil mulch over it."

"This is the best treatment for any declining tree, whether its poor condition is due to diseases, insects, or inorganic causes. The general principle is, as far as possible, to remove the cause of the injury, stimulate the tree by pruning back, and by fertilizing with a quickly-acting fertilizer, like nitrate of soda, and by watering, followed by mulching or cultivation. Little else than this can be done."

THE POTATO STALK BORER.

A pest of increasing importance in this State is the Potato Stalk Borer. Among many letters on this subject by State Zoologist, Prof. H. A. Surface, the following is a reply to a prominent potato grower in Cumberland county, in which the insect methods for the suppression of this pest are given in detail:

"The potato stalk which you sent to us is infested with the Potato Stalk Borer. This is the larva or grub of the little black moth beetle. It has been a very serious pest in potatoes in the eastern, southern and south-eastern parts of this State, and appears to be spreading."

"When the stalk is once infested with the pest, it is really impossible to do anything for it, for the reason that the insect feeds inside the stalk, where spray liquid can not reach it. Therefore, preventive means consist chiefly of cultural methods, and these must be adopted. In the first place, one should rotate his crops, and not plant potatoes twice in succession on the same soil, and if the pests are very near the place where potatoes grew during a previous year. This is one of the most important means of preventing other pests, such as Scab and Potato Beetles, as well as the Stalk Borer."

"As soon as evidence of the Stalk Borer is seen, which is generally made manifest by the yellowing or wilting of the vine, the pest should be pulled and burned. This, of course, does not help them for this year, but it prevents the spread of the pest for another year, and this is the chief purpose of object in such pest suppression."

"A grower can detect the presence of the Stalk Borer by splitting the vines and finding the grubs at work within. If the stalk or vine has been bored out or eaten out by insects, he may be pretty sure that this pest is the one that was responsible. It is very important that all vines in the same field or patch where any were so attacked, should be pulled together and burned as soon as possible after detecting. This is to destroy the insects which remain within them, and is one of the best means of helping to get the Stalk Borer under complete control. Little else than this can be recommended, besides close cooperation of all people in the neighborhood who grow potatoes."

"This article will be published in the newspapers as you request, for the sake of giving this information to others who need it, as well as to call the attention of the public to the very extreme importance of the cooperation of growers of any and all kinds of vegetation, to the suppression of pests by such cultural means, and thus prevent such losses from them as have been experienced from this pest in the Heelan Fry and other pests during recent months."

TO INCREASE THE SIZE OF FRUITS.

A fruit grower in the northern part of the State has recently written to the Economic Zoologist of the Department of Agriculture requesting to know whether there was any known method by means of which the size of his apples might be increased. Prof. Surface answered by giving the following recommendations:

"To increase the size of apples, I beg to say that there is nothing better than to water the soil abundantly, after having scattered one pound or two of nitrate of soda around the trees, a little farther than the branches extend. If the ground is sloping, it is well to make a bank around the lower side of the tree to hold the water. This should extend over an area nearly as far as the branches reach. If you can find it possible to soak several barrels into the ground at each tree, it will not only stop the drooping of the fruit, but will make it of much larger size."

"Also the immediate thinning off of all damaged and inferior fruits will make larger and better fruits of those that remain on the trees and will have a tendency to stop drooping."

"The dry weather has been unusual, severe on practically all farm crops, and also on fruits. There never has been a season when good, thorough drainage and cultivation in an orchard has told such a story as this year. Fruits are staying on the trees where cultivated; those not cultivated are falling quite prematurely."

"By thinning one is able to get rid of such pests as the Codling Moth, Railroad Maggot and Curculio. If he will destroy by promptly feeding to him burning or deeply burying, those which he takes off."

A PALACE PIG PEN

Bucks County Has $4000 Structure Near Emille.

A new pig pen lately completed on the farm of Edith B. Morris, near Emille, Bucks county, represents an unusual architectural lines it has attracted much attention. Everything has been made as sanitary as possible. The pen is built facing the south and is 120 feet long and 35 feet wide. It contains 35 windows. The main part of the building is of frame with rubberoid roof. The inside of the pen is all finished in oil and the floors are of concrete. The pens have drains in the middle, which are made of painted cast iron, always to be kept clean. The windows are all opened by one lever and the trap doors to let the pigs from their pens into the yard are also worked in the same manner. At feeding time the iron railing making the front of the pen is pushed over the trough while the feed is put in and mixed.

The interior of the pen is made with twenty pens, ten on a side, with a large weighing scale at one end for weighing pigs, feed, etc. The building is large enough to drive through with a two horse team and feed from each side of the wagon. The pigs have ample running yards and place to rest, but are kept very clean.

The water used is supplied from a 1000 gallon air compressed tank. Mr. Morris has a fine stock of White Chester which he uses for breeding purposes. The building was planned by Albert S. Hibbs, Fallington.

Mr. Morris lives in Frankfort, Philadelphia, and has the place at all summer home. Mr. Morris house is one of the largest in Bucks county, and the place is worth a visit.

Having reached a depth of 500 feet without finding a sufficient supply of water, Southern Council has determined to drill another well at same point.

Stickney Gasoline Engines
ARE THE BEST

Economy—

We Can Help You

You know that you should have a Stickney Engine but do you know what size will do your work most economically, both in cost of fuel and in the expenditure of your time as an engine too small to do the work is not true economy. It is not economy to overload your engine nor to run it at too high a speed. Again the right size of an engine will not give proper results unless the pulley sizes are right and the hook up is correct. This is where we can help you before you buy as well as look after you when you have bought.

Once more let us offer our help and show you the Stickney Engine—its outside igniter, its perfect cooling system, its automatic mixer, its ball bearing governor and its three point suspension.

"A Band of Forgers."

The Challenge.

The Professor—No, sir, there is no animal living what I cannot subdue by simply looking him steadily in the eye ball. I will bet one thousand dollars.
